

Collaborative Practice and Interprofessional Education

Transforming the Landscape of Healthcare - Ohomairangi te Hauora Manaaki

What do Clients really want?

Monica Moran

As interprofessional educators and service providers, our practices and the decisions we make about interprofessional service design and delivery are predicated on an assumption that we know what our clients want. This address will explore what we know about what our clients do and do not want, pitfalls of suppositions, and strategies at local, national and international levels to move toward enduring client centred interprofessional collaborative practice.
